GENERAL NEWS.

Favorable Crop Prospects in the North-West.

[SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

NEW YORK, April 21.—The Herald has an editorial headed "A Beached Administration," in which it says: We are sincerely anxious to see Garfield's administration fairly under way, to use a seafaring phrase. It may be said to have gone aground before crossing the bar. The only definite policy that we have yet seen evidenced from Garfield's friends is that he has made up his mind to be a candidate for a second term. The administration that begins on the level which Garfield now finds himself does not give the country that assurance for a successful term of office which his friends and his character led us to expect. As it now stands things could not be more unfortunate for him. The congress is at a deadlock, the senate is overrun with hot, passionate debates, important departments of the government are at a standstill because of the failure of the senate to confirm nominations, the storm of sectional animosity runs higher than we have seen it since [illegible] debates in 1861, the president is entangled in a local political squabble, and the country instead of being invited to contemplate some grand and statesmanlike policy for the development of its resources, is asked to take part in a grand quarrel between New York politicians, as to who shall have control of the custom house. The only way out of this tangle is for the president to assert himself and take command of his administration and put aside the crowds of time servers and servants who always [illegible] about the White House and fawn and flatter in hopes of preferment.

A Bad Character.

NEW YORK, April 21.—Secretary Blaine has sent a letter to Mayor Grace saying that the department of state has information of the expected arrival at this port shortly of Baron Potthauser, recently imprisoned at Brazil, after five or six years' imprisonment on conviction of attempted robbery and assassination. He was to have been shipped from Rio Janeiro March 15th as a member of the crew of the British steamship Grecian, bound to New York and [illegible], and the belief is that the baron would probably conclude to remain here if an opportunity was offered. Secretary Blaine thinks it proper that he be kept track of by the police. The Grecian has been out 37 days.

No Bargain between Conkling and the Democrats.

Statements made about a bargain or coalition between Conkling and democratic senators for the rejection of Robertson are entirely unfounded. There has been neither bargain nor coalition, though a number of democratic senators express a determination to vote with Conkling. This grows out of the belief that the administration is unfriendly to the south, and not from any understanding with Conkling. Friends of Conkling say that he could not have such a coalition if he desired, and would not if he could.

Grain Prospects in the Northwest.

NEW YORK, April 21.—The Commercial Bulletin says: Late reports from some of the northwestern grain growing states taken as a whole are quite encouraging. Seeding will unquestionably be late, but the compensating fact for a cold, wet spring is that the deeper strata of the soil will be filled with a reserve store of moisture as a safeguard against a summer drought. The most reliable authorities take this view and are very far, therefore, from sharing the apprehensions of the croaker family.

Falling Off in Breadstuffs Exports.

The total value of exports of domestic breadstuffs for the nine months ended March, 1881, $201,892,[illegible], against $[illegible] for the nine months ended March, 1880.

Terrible Explosion at Binghamton, N. Y.

BINGHAMTON, April 21.—About 7:30 this morning two terrible and almost simultaneous explosions occurred from nitro glycerine in the nitric vaults of the [illegible] powder works in this city. About five minutes afterward 10,000 pounds of sporting powder in a storehouse about 100 feet from the nitric vaults ignited and caused another terrible explosion. The buildings were demolished and scattered in every direction and property destroyed for miles around, fences blown to atoms, trees uprooted, many buildings in the neighborhood badly shattered and windows three miles away down out in the [illegible]. The shock was distinctly felt 20 miles away. No one seriously hurt.

Approval of Robertson by New York Republicans.

[illegible] tonight approved the nomination of Judge Robertson for collector of the port.

BROOKLYN, April 21.—The Lincoln club, the leading young men's republican organization of this city, this evening strongly endorsed the nomination of Judge Robertson for collector at New York.

The Canadian Pacific.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., April 21.—The Canadian Pacific syndicate has decided to construct a road almost due west from the portage to the prairie, making it 100 miles nearer to the boundary line than was intended.

Strike of Carmen at Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, April 21.—Street railway employers struck today for half a dollar increase, which was refused and new men were hired as fast as possible. The strikers peaceably induced many men to leave the cars but travel was not entirely prevented.

Successfully Launched.

TOLEDO, April 21.—The schooner David Dows, the largest sail or vessel ever built on fresh water was successfully launched this afternoon from the ship yards of Bailey Bros. The Dows is 275 feet long, 38 feet beam and 22 feet deep.

Robbery.

RICHMOND, April 21.—While Charles Duffey, traveling salesman for Enos, Richardson & Co., dealers in jewelry in New York, was at supper, his room in hotel was entered, and a valise containing between $5000 and $10,000 worth of gold charms stolen. About $5000 worth of jewelry in the trunk was not touched.

A Street Fight.

NORFOLK, Va., April 21.—M. Glennan, editor of the Norfolk Virginian and a prominent democrat, was assaulted in the street this afternoon by W. A. Swank, a lawyer and readjuster.

Rarus Again.

HARTFORD, April 21.—The national trotting association will be asked to reinstate Rarus, expelled because of withdrawal from an advertised race with Hopeful.

Fatally Burned.

Mrs. Warner, of Canton, and Mrs. Martin Coffee, of [illegible], were fatally burned, being surrounded by flames while burning brush.

Looks Bad.

NEW ORLEANS, April 21.—The Democrat publishes a statement alleging that all stories told by Mr. Heath with regard to his troubles in Louisiana are false. Heath owns no property in Louisiana, his brother being the sole owner. It is believed that he burned the property for the insurance.

Heath Explains.

[illegible], April 21.—Charles Heath has explained certain points of his recent statement regarding outrages upon him in Louisiana, showing that the story thereof was originally related to Mr. Bowman of Mississippi, who gave it to Dawes. Heath admits that he was incorrect concerning the dates mentioned in his recent statement.

BERLIN, April 21.—Emperor William is recovering from indisposition. All rumors in regard to the settlement of the succession to the ducal throne of Brunswick are entirely without foundation.

Another Strike at Chicago.

CHICAGO, April 21.

All freight handlers struck today for an advance of from 15 to 20 cents per day.

Several more strikes are reported in the city and employers seem to be determined to force up wages to living rates.

Lawsuit About a Horse Race.

LOUISVILLE, April 21.—The case submitted today as to possession of $5000 that the horse Irish King won at the Louisville fall races of 1879. Colston, who was Harper's trainer, alleges in his petition that Harper agreed to give him Irish King, provided he would manage Ten Broeck so as to beat Mollie McCarthy in the great race between these celebrated horses in July 4, 1878, that Ten Broeck did beat McCarthy, and that Harper thereafter gave and transferred to him Irish King according to agreement. Harper claimed that he had Irish King already entered for the fall races of 1879, and he did not mean to give Colston possession until after all his engagements were kept.

Wheat Prospects in Kansas.

TOPEKA, April 21.—A special dispatch to Commonwealth from 35 counties in Kansas, including more than 20 of the largest wheat growing counties in the state, report much more acreage of winter wheat than ever before, with every prospect of more than an average crop. The hard freezing winter does not seem to have injured it as much as expected, the late warm rains generally throughout the state having started vigorous growth in many fields where it was thought to be winter killed. If no more freezing weather occur, full two-thirds of a crop of fruit can be expected. It has been raining steadily during the day. Moody and Sankey are addressing immense audiences here.

Nebraska Crop Prospects.

LINCOLN, April 21.—A protracted rain storm prevails. Farmers are delaying planting. A large area of wheat is sown. Prospects for winter wheat over the state are only average.

Murder in Arkansas.

LITTLE ROCK, April 21.—Jerry Sneall, a well known resident of Washington Co., was murdered lately by two negroes and one white man, who riddled his body with bullets. The murder was the result of threatening conduct of the home stealing [illegible] parties charged.

Explosion

The C., M. & St. Paul.

MILWAUKEE, April 21.—The [illegible] gross earnings of the [illegible] increase in earnings $106,000.

The A., T. & S. F. R. R.

[illegible] April 21.—The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad company was held here today. The following directors were elected: T. J. Coolidge, [illegible], [illegible] Shaw, B. P. Cheney, S. L. Thorndike, [illegible], C. W. Pierce, W. Powell [illegible], S. A. Kent of Chicago, [illegible] and E. Remley. After which the following officers were elected: J. [illegible] Coolidge, president; W. B. Strong, vice-president and general manager; [illegible] Thorndike, comptroller; [illegible], secretary and treasurer; [illegible] assistant treasurer [illegible].

across more than 2700 miles of railroad in Kansas, Colorado and New Mexico, valued at $25,000,000. During the past year they have constructed over 100 miles of new road, purchased a million and a half dollars' worth of rolling stock and expended half a million dollars in improving the line already built.

Besides representatives of foreign powers, members of parliament will be at the funeral. Representatives of every department of the civil service will also attend.

His majesty is never seen outside of the immediate [illegible] Anitschkoff palace, his town mansion, has been entrusted to the guardianship of three hundred men of the Pavlovsky guards. A nihilist manifesto announcing the approaching death of Alexander III. has been received by all Russian ministers and court officials.

Fight between Turkish Troops and Albanians.

LONDON, April 21.—A sanguinary engagement took place Tuesday between the Ural battalion of Turks, under Dervish Pasha, and the Albanians. The latter attempted to stop Dervish Pasha's advance. After several hours' fighting between Pristina and Prizren, Dervish Pasha continued his advance. Dervish Pasha has issued a proclamation announcing that he will suppress all seditious attempts, and [illegible] reforms. He exhorts the Albanians to return to duty, warning them that otherwise they will be treated with the greatest rigor as rebels.

LITERARY NOTES.

Mr. Beecher announces that he has resumed work again on his "Life of Christ."

An American edition of "A Dictionary of the Anonymous and Pseudonymous Literature of Great Britain" will soon be published in Boston.

The first part of the Brinley library brought $40,[illegible], the second part $[illegible]. The third part is now being sold, and the fourth part will be sold next year.

The London correspondent of the Publishers' Weekly announces that Mr. Robert Browning is writing a new poem, to be called "[illegible]."

[illegible]

The authorities of the Oxford and Cambridge University presses announce that the publication of the revised version of the New Testament will take place about the middle of May.

The Harpers have printed [illegible] the Franconia [illegible] volume [illegible] only at [illegible]. The Harpers also print [illegible] Metternich's "Memoirs" in the Franklin Square Library.

Joaquin Miller has just published another book, "Shadows of Shasta," which treats even the Indians. "The Indians of the mountains," he says, "is the bravest, bravest, truest man alive." Again, "the only really religious, unswerving, and absolutely devout Christians I ever met in America are Indians." Both of which very characteristic of "Wa[illegible]."

The state department is supposed to be negotiating with the English government for a copyright treaty to secure reciprocal protection in this country and England for the authors of both. In his "American View of the Copyright Question" Mr. Richard Grant White doubts if such a treaty would be effective. "For," as he says, "copyright is not properly the subject of treaty. The matter has been placed by the constitution in the hands of congress, and it is settled law that a power granted by the constitution to congress is exclusive."

The Kansas Prohibitory Law.

An exchange says: "The new prohibitory law of Kansas is meeting with the strongest opposition from a quarter whence trouble was probably least expected. The law absolutely forbids the use of wine in the sacrament, punishing the minister who so administers the sacrament with two years' imprisonment in the penitentiary, and shutting up the church itself as a public nuisance, according to the interpretation of the Rev. Dr. Beatty, rector of the Episcopal church at Lawrence. Last Sunday that clergyman administered the sacrament as usual, regardless of the consequences, having previously announced to the congregation his determination to do so. He said: 'We are willing to render unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's, but we will still give to God the things that are His. I say, as did Peter, whether ye who [illegible] we should obey men rather than God.' Of one thing you may be assured, we shall never recognize for a moment the attempt of human legislation to destroy the freedom of worship of the Christian church.' It is probable that the Rev. Dr. Beatty's action will be imitated by other clergymen, and the result is hard to predict. It will be argued that the state cannot permit the prohibition law to be openly violated by clergymen without arousing a storm of opposition from those to whom its enforcement is a peculiarly dear, and, on the other hand, that to consign the Rev. Dr. Beatty to prison and close his church as a nuisance would place a sharp weapon in the hands of those who want to see the new law hewn down, root and branch."

This is not that blind intemperate fanaticism is producing a reaction that will render abortive all the coercive teetotalism.

The Dangerous Senatorial Oligarchy.

[New York Tribune.]

For years the energies of the senate have been steadily concentrating on the disposition of appointments as to which the constitution gives them only an advisory and secondary power. Nor is that the worst. We might very well understand the desire of senators to interpret to their own greatest advantage the constitutional requirement that they shall "consent" to certain nominations that are to be made to them by the president, and that they shall "advise" regarding them. But there is no justification in the constitution, none in the law, none in any fair view of the public interest, for the idea that the senate as a body shall surrender its discretion to the individual senators from states in which officers are to be appointed. The "courtesy" of the senate, as this practice is called, is simply a piece of usurpation, to which its prototype in the olden time [illegible] of peculiar hypocrisy and impertinence. And, again, even this is not the worst. It has grown to be the custom that senators who have arrogated control of appointments to offices in their states also claim a large interest in minor appointments vested in the officers nominated to the senate. It is this elaborate system of office mongering which has engrossed senators, blinded them to their high constitutional duty, and, to a marked extent, changed them from legislators of the most responsible class to traffickers in the spoils, political and otherwise, of office.

A Good Thing for Musicians.

[Popular Science Monthly.]

The melograph is a new apparatus recently invented by M. Roncalli, of Paris, which it is claimed automatically and instantaneously inscribes in conventional characters which may be subsequently read and transcribed, the melodies that may occur to the mind of the musician at the very moment of inspiration. Electricity is one of the prominent agents in the construction of the machine, which registers the various tones of music by means of the instrument to which it is attached, upon the principle of vibration. [illegible] the working of the phonograph. The mechanism is rather complicated in its construction and a satisfactory description of it would take more space than we can allow for that purpose.

An Exhibition of Political Revenge.

The appointment by the president to-day [illegible] R. [illegible] as collector of [illegible] for the [illegible] district of North Carolina in place of Wm. H. Wheeler, removed, is a subject of great [illegible] among republicans, and [illegible] brought about. WASHINGTON, April 21.

A motion for [illegible] executive session was voted down 22 to 21.

Cameron of Pennsylvania moved that when the senate adjourns to-day it be to meet next Monday.

Cameron claimed that Dawes had not always been ready to be as now, but had proposed adjournment last week in order that he [illegible] to New York.

Dawes denied this and there was a short [illegible] which developed [illegible] signs of a split among the republicans on the question of [illegible]. AMERICAN DAIRY INTERESTS.

In the American Dairyman, a weekly journal published in New York and devoted to the dairy interests of the country, we find a report of the [illegible] delivered by Francis D. Moulton of the International Dairy Fair Association before the public health committee of the legislature of New York, on the [illegible] oleomargarine. Some notice of this address has heretofore appeared in our columns. Besides its exposure of the extent to which the manufacture of the nauseous stuff above named is carried on as well as of the abominably filthy methods of its manufacture, the address contains a valuable review of the legitimate dairy business of the country. The rapid growth of the business and its present magnitude are alike surprising. Thirty years ago dairying had not become a special industry in this country. Fifteen years ago, New York and Ohio were the only recognized dairy states, and Canada imported her cheese. Within ten years past a dairy writer limited the territory suitable for dairying purposes to a narrow belt running across the states of Vermont and New York, taking in two counties in Pennsylvania, the northern part of Ohio, a narrow strip in southern Michigan and northern Indiana and a small section of Illinois and Wisconsin. There were then a few creameries in New York, Pennsylvania and Illinois. Now the dairy belt includes nearly all of Vermont and New York, all of northern Ohio, large parts of Pennsylvania, Michigan and Indiana, and half of Wisconsin and Illinois. It has crossed the Mississippi and 100 miles square of Iowa is a thrifty and important butter and cheese district. Minnesota has also become a large producer of butter and cheese; northern Missouri and Kansas and Nebraska are also largely engaged in the business. Creameries have become the rule and have taken the place of the private dairies. New York produced in 1875 agricultural products to the value of $75,000,000 and in the same year the value of the milk, butter and cheese produced in the state was $50,000,000.

Of course the production of so-called butter from the refuse fat of slaughter houses greatly injures the trade in honest dairy products. It injures it in two ways: First, by providing an article which competes at a low price with genuine butter, and which people buy and eat largely because they don't know what it is; and second, by creating prejudice in foreign markets against all American butter. It is not strange that people abroad should be led by the discovery of these vile and fraudulent substitutes for butter to look with suspicion on all dairy products from America. Cheese also is largely counterfeited in our American stink factories.

The export of dairy products from New York for the ten months from May 1, 1880, to March 31, 1881, were as follows:

Butter, pounds	22,588,121
Cheese, pounds	132,149,741

During the same period no less than 10,419,-982 pounds of oleomargarine were exported. It is probable, indeed, that the exports of this last article were much larger than these figures, since much must have passed under the name of butter, without detection.

The legitimate dairy business can be extended in the United States almost infinitely. No locality can be better for it than Oregon and Washington. It is a reproach to our want of intelligent enterprise that when consumers call upon Portland grocers for a nice article of butter they are told about as often as otherwise that they must wait for it till the steamer from California is in.

THE MONETARY CONFERENCE.

Observers whose special knowledge of the subject which the international monetary conference is called to discuss entitles their opinions and judgment to weight regarding its objects and probable results, do not expect from the conference any actual settlement of the questions involved in the proposed regulation of the ratio of value between silver and gold. It is understood that France intends to propose that "a bimetallic union be formed by a preponderating group of nations," urging that such union "would have the immediate effect of re-establishing on a solid basis the old universal par of value between the two metals, of enabling Europe without any loss to employ its old silver coins in paying America, and reciprocally of enabling the United States when its balance of trade allows it to pay Europe with silver from its mines; and, lastly, of making silver a universal money, while retaining gold on the footing of 15½ as European and American money." Great Britain and Germany have as yet evinced no disposition to accede to this plan; and without them, and especially without Great Britain, the project would probably be found hopeless. The commercial supremacy of Great Britain gives her a commanding position on every question of this nature. The main argument for the agreement is that if the two metals are used without limit by a sufficient number of powerful states to maintain them in the market at the agreed legal ratio then the paying power of either will be more stable than it would be if disjoined from the other.

The object of this conference being to "rehabilitate" silver, it will be a failure unless the programme of the silver advocates shall be adopted. That programme is understood to embody substantially the following articles: 1. Each of the members of the union shall admit both metals to mintage, without limitation of quantity, at the ratio of 15½ to 1. 2. Each state, adhering to this ratio as to pure metal, shall remain free to retain its monetary denominations and proportions of alloy, or to change them. 3. Any person shall be entitled to take any quantity of gold or silver, either in ingots or foreign coin, to the mints of any union state and have it made into the coin of that state and returned to him in that form, free of charge. 4. The mints of each of the states shall coin and return as speedily as possible all the metal brought to them for that purpose. If the person bringing the metal requests immediate payment, it shall be made to him, subject to a reduction not exceeding one-fifth of one per cent., in gold or silver coin, or in notes being legal tender, and convertible at sight into metallic money." 5. The gold and silver money shall be at the legal tender to any amount in the state which shall have minted them. 6. Each state to have exclusive control, as at present, of its token silver and minor coinage. 7. The issuing, or authorizing to be issued, of paper money shall not relieve any state so issuing from the obligation to hold its mints open at all time for the coinage of gold and silver in accordance with the terms of the convention. 8. There shall be no customs duty on either the importation or the exportation of gold and silver. 9. The reception of silver shall commence at the same date in all the mints of the union. 10. The convention to remain in force till the first day of January, 1886. If not terminated upon one year's notice before that date, it shall hold for ten years longer, and so on for periods of ten years. [illegible] of any nation having less than 20,-000,000 inhabitants, or subject to the union, [illegible] shall form into the treaty as to such state, but not as to any other in the union; and, as to all the others, the treaty shall continue to be renewed for periods of ten years.

WATERED STOCK.

In the courts of Canada there is now a case which is attracting much attention, and which may be an object of interest to many persons in the United States from the [illegible] it affords to innumerable instances of stock watering with which the history of corporations in this country abounds. It appears that a [illegible] company was organized in [illegible] city of Canada in the year 1861 with a paid up capital of $10,000. Subsequently this was increased to $50,000. The company soon reached such a [illegible] prosperity as to be able to pay regular dividends of [illegible] per cent per annum. [illegible] the stock [illegible] the company [illegible] and they [illegible] to double the nominal capital without increasing the actual capital of the company. At this time there were only [illegible] shareholders. Among these the new stock was divided in proportion to their legitimate holdings. The new stock was issued as paid up stock, though in fact nothing was paid upon it. After a year or two the holders began selling the stock in the market, the reports of the directors of the company showing that the capital of $120,000 had been paid in, which was contrary to the facts. The stock has now passed into the hands of a considerable number of persons, but the fact that it had been watered as above described has only recently come to the knowledge of the purchasers. A bill therefore has been filed against the persons to whom the $65,000 of new stock was issued praying that they may be ordered to pay it up, or that they may be ordered to return such of their stock as still remains in their hands to the company, and to pay for that which has passed into the hands of innocent purchasers. The defendants do not deny the facts stated in the bill, but they set up that the persons now complaining have acquiesced in the manner in which the stock was [illegible]. The case is still pending in court. In certain points it suggests parallels to the litigation over the watered stock of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company.

A RARE BOOK.

In the Brinley collection, known as one of the finest and most valuable libraries in America, and just sold by auction in New York, was a copy of the first edition of the famous Gutenberg Bible. Of this edition only four copies are known to exist. Its exact date is not known, but it lies between the years 1450 and 1455. Large part of the extraordinary value of these rare copies of the Bible arises from the fact that they are undoubtedly the work of the man who invented the art of printing, or who at least first carried it into successful operation, and moreover are believed to be the first entire volumes of any kind ever printed. The text of this Bible is the Vulgate of Jerome with his prologue, familiar only to scholars. The type is Gothic and not only the hundreds of illuminated capitals brilliantly colored and decorated, but the paucity of typographical errors and the nice execution of detail, show the great labor expended on it. The book is in two volumes in the original binding of thick oak boards, sheathed in calf, beautifully stamped, protected at the corners with ornamental shields of brass and decorated in the center with bosses and various designs. The Gothic letters are said to be still as fresh as they were four hundred years ago. For four centuries the book lay buried in an obscure library at Erfurt, where it was discovered about fifteen years ago. At the auction in New York a few evenings since, the first bid for the book was $5000, by Mr. John R. Bartlett. A gentleman named Brayton Ives was anxious to get it and ran the price up to $7500. It was finally bought by Mr. Hamilton Cole, a lawyer of New York, for $8000. A copy of the same edition sold in England some years ago for £3400.

The note from Mr. William Reid published in another column is a mere quibble. He changed the name of his corporation from Oregon Railway Company to Oregonian Railway Company, and now tries to disown, disclaim or deny the suit brought in the company's original name. Mr. Reid offers us one thousand dollars, upon certain conditions. He would do far better to offer some one the money to induce him (Mr. Reid) to stop writing letters that so greatly stultify himself and serve at the same time to keep fresh in the public mind the odium attaching to the attempt of his company to rob the city of its property. Or, perhaps it might be as well to take the one thousand dollars, add something more to it, and honestly buy a site for a depot.

The price of the first edition of the revised New Testament in England, will be twelve dollars per copy. The passage (Rev. xxii: 17) "And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely," ought to be omitted from this edition.

The richest man in the senate is said to be Don Cameron. He can't make any kind of a speech; which illustrates the old proverb that silence is golden.

Fourth of July Celebration.—At the last regular meeting of the common council, the sum of $500 was appropriated toward defraying the necessary expenses of celebrating in a becoming manner the coming Fourth of July. A movement is now on foot among the citizens of Portland, [illegible] to celebrate the national birthday in a manner befitting its significance and importance. To this end, a public meeting will be held at the court house next Thursday evening, April 28, at 7:30 o'clock, to make the necessary arrangements.

Sisters of Charity Arrived.—Six Sisters of Charity of the House of Providence, in company of the Mother general of the same order, arrived here yesterday by the last steamer. They received a warm reception, and were welcome guests at St. Vincent's [illegible]. These sisters will be assigned to different departments of the different schools, orphanages and hospitals of this ecclesiastical province. The mother general, after having visited the numerous institutions of the order over which she presides, will go back to the Mother House, Montreal, Canada.

[illegible] —We are informed that the meeting of representatives from each warehouse and [illegible] will not take place until May 10th. [illegible]

First Regular Trip.—Yesterday at [illegible] the new and pretty steamer [illegible] backed out into the stream and was on her way for Vancouver, where she is owned [illegible]

[illegible]

Mail Delayed.—Yesterday morning the paper mail for The Dalles and other points up the Columbia did not get off on the boat. The failure was caused by the morning dispatch clerk accidentally oversleeping himself. The failure was not the fault of railway service.

Olympic Club.—The Olympic Club will give their annual exhibitions at New Market Theater on the evenings of May 6th and 7th. Full particulars will be given hereafter.

MILITARY AND PERSONAL.

[Vancouver Independent.]

Lieut. [illegible] Galbraith, 1st cavalry, has gone to old Fort Harney on temporary duty.

Lieut. H. H. Benham, 2d infantry, returned from San Francisco to this post on Thursday, 14th inst.

Surgeon F. C. Ainsworth, formerly stationed at Fort Vancouver, has been ordered to the department of the south.

The wife of Col. G. H. Weeks, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Babbitt, at Fortress Monroe, has returned to Leavenworth.

Asst. Surgeon Wm. G. Spencer, U. S. A., arrived at the post from Fort Townsend on Saturday on his way to Fort Coeur d'Alene.

Lieut. B. C. Bailey, 21st infantry, and wife, sailed for San Francisco on Tuesday, on the steamship [illegible], en route to Washington.

Capt. J. J. Gilbert, of the coast survey, has been ordered back to California for duty this season, and will probably return to this territory next year.

Lieut. J. W. Duncan, 21st infantry, who spent the winter in Washington with his father, [illegible] Duncan, retired, has started on his return to this post.

A man named Webb has been arrested and put in irons at Fort Klamath, charged with supplying soldiers at the garrison with liquor. He was caught while conveying a barrel of whisky to a logger on Wood river, near the post.

SUPREME COURT.

Salem, April 21, 1881.

The court met at 9 o'clock, full bench present. Sarah Besser resp. vs W. H. D. Joyce, app. Decision of the circuit court modified. Opinion by Watson, J.

SYLLABUS.

A creditor who was not made a party to proceedings in bankruptcy is not precluded from subsequently impeaching a fraudulent conveyance of his property made by his debtor prior to such proceedings, but kept concealed from him [illegible] the termination of such proceedings.

A husband since the adoption of the state constitution has no such interest or estate in his wife's separate real property during her life as can be taken on execution by his creditors, and his joining with her in a deed voluntarily and without consideration to enable her to alienate the same cannot be deemed a fraud upon his creditors, although he thereby loses his right to become a tenant by the curtesy in such property after her death. The Pirates of Penzance.—[illegible]

[illegible]

The choruses were superb. Each member sang as though the success of the opera depended on his or her individual efforts, and nothing was lacking in spirit, force, expression, shading or precision. [illegible] The orchestra, composed of fifteen pieces, under the leadership of Mr. Simon Harris, was decidedly the best ever heard in New Market. The overture was a gem.

The audience was large and enthusiastic. The opera will be repeated to-night and to-morrow night and at Saturday matinee.

THE REAL ESTATE MARKET.

The business of the week has been brisk. The number of transactions recorded is 42, and the amount involved $[illegible]. [illegible]'s Addition this week has taken the lead, with nine deedings and $27,109. This prominence is owing to the number of purchases and sales along and adjacent to the line of North Front street. The dealings in these properties has been the main feature of the week, and everything on that line that could be secured at moderate rates has found ready purchasers. Speculations as to the cause of this movement have been as numerous as the transactions themselves. It is probable the proposed immediate erection of a long line of warehouses by Mr. C. H. Lewis on North First was the first exciting cause, augmented by a growing idea that the broad gauge lines will all concentrate in that direction. The country and suburban sales number eight, amounting to $[illegible]. Couch's Addition, 5 deeds, $27,109; Carter's Addition, 1 deed, $[illegible]; town of Albina, 1 deed, $[illegible]; city, 7 deeds, $[illegible]; Caruthers & southward, 2 deeds, $[illegible]; East Portland, 4 deeds, $[illegible].

MISREPRESENTATION OF FACTS.

Portland, April 20, 1881.

To the Editor of the Oregonian:

In my letter of yesterday I stated that the Oregonian Railway Company, Limited, had no connection with, and was no party to, nor did it raise the state supreme court suit to which you referred. In your editorial yesterday you do me the honor to deny the veracity of my statement to this effect. Will you please, therefore, step up to the county court house, and if you find thereon recorded any suit raised by or in the name of the Oregonian Railway Company, Limited, against the city of Portland, as you state in your editorial, and as appeared in your paper of Tuesday last, I will guarantee in that event to forfeit and pay you the sum of one thousand dollars.

The company which raised the levee suit is not now in existence, and its successors attached so little importance thereto (seeing they were already in possession of the levee) that no attorney or other representative did appear in the supreme court at Salem on its behalf when the suit was called therein. We are told that "facts are chiels that winna ding." Pardon me in saying that frequently if certain newspaper reporters would remember this proverb, and report nothing which was not strictly true, a vast amount of annoyance would be saved to innocent persons in Portland and the press of the city more highly respected.

WILLIAM REID.

PERSONAL.

B. F. Saylor, the well known merchant and express agent at Goldendale, W. T., is on a business visit to this city. He will remain about a week.

Hon. J. P. Caples goes to-day to New Tacoma by invitation of the A. O. U. W. of that place, to deliver an address at an entertainment to be given by that order this evening. Mr. Caples is accompanied by his eldest daughter.

RELIGIOUS NOTES.

[illegible]

The Rev. [illegible] arrived home from a trip to [illegible] yesterday, where he had the pleasure of [illegible] the Benedictine Sisters [illegible].

We are requested to notify the [illegible] that their respective pastors will, according to mutual agreement, exchange pulpits next Sunday, to accommodate their [illegible] during Easter-tide.

[illegible] Congregational church, situated at the corner of Twenty-fifth and E streets, was organized about two years ago. It has now a membership of [illegible] and a good Sabbath school of which [illegible] is superintendent, with [illegible] as secretary.

[illegible]

The state [illegible] convention of the Oregon and Washington [illegible] will be held at Salem [illegible] during July. This will afford delegates who attend from Oregon and eastern Washington an opportunity of visiting the capital and breathing the bracing sea air during a portion of [illegible] the convention.

Mr. John Weiss, one of [illegible] agreeably surprised the [illegible] congregation [illegible] recently by presenting to their church a really beautiful altar, to be dedicated to the honor of the Mother of God. This altar was designed, built and carved by Mr. Weiss himself. It presents a rich ornament to the church and is highly pleasing to the entire congregation.

A letter just received announces that the organ for the Taylor Street church will be shipped from San Francisco on the 1st of next month. It will arrive here about the 4th and the concert will be given about the 15th. The organist for the concert [illegible] from San Francisco, [illegible] from the east, and is one of the finest performers in America. This entertainment will give an opportunity to many in this city to hear music such as they will never hear again.

"AS YE SOW, SO SHALL YE REAP."

Howard Simpson and Loraine Bliss, two young men of great intimacy and of dissipated habits, were on their way to a gambling saloon, where the night previous they had won considerable, and in passing a church the doors of which were open, paused a moment by the steps peering in out of idle curiosity, just as the minister was giving out his text, "As ye sow, so shall ye reap."

"We are not farmers, so we don't sow anything to reap," said Howard, the elder and more profligate of the two. But Loraine looked thoughtful, and kept silent as they walked along toward the place of their night's debauch. And often during the jubilant gayety of the revelers that passage, "As ye sow, so shall ye reap," flashed into his mind.

"It is as my good mother tells me," thought he; "we must suffer for every evil deed done in the body, and my deeds are constantly evil. But from this night I will do differently. I will not be caught in this place again."

"What ails you, Bliss? You are as dull as a November [illegible]," said Gaylright, one of the ringleaders of the company.

"Guess he's thinking about reaping what he sows," answered Simpson, and then about a dozen rude men burst into a loud fit of laughter.

"What did you mean by that remark?" one of them presently asked.

He then told them of the text given out by the minister as they were passing the church.

"The minister go to [illegible] and he surely will," said Reardon, one of the most blasphemous of the whole gang.

This profane remark, with others no better, grated harshly on the mind of Loraine, for he was really feeling more serious than he had ever felt before; but he made no reply, knowing if he did it would only serve to call forth still harsher language. He left as early as he could, and after he got home crept to his chamber as noiselessly as possible, that he might not awaken his father, who, at times, was very harsh to him. Then, for the first time in his life, he offered a sincere prayer to God, beseeching him to give him strength to turn from the evil way into which he had been led.

Meantime, his father having heard him come into the house, was denouncing him in the severest terms.

"Do not be harsh with him," pleaded the mother. "I hope he will soon learn to do better. He's young and wild, though not vicious, I trust."

But the old gentleman could see naught but wrong in his boy.

"He shall leave the house! I will disinherit him if he does not stay at home nights; he is a disgrace to the family. Think of the money I have paid out for him, sent him to college, given him the privilege of studying law with me in my office. But no, he chooses to spend his time carousing with a set of loafers."

"Perhaps if we are gentle with him," tremblingly whispered his mother.

But the old gentleman did not heed this advice, for the next morning his first salutation to Loraine was:

"Where did you stay so late last night, you disgrace? Unless you mend your ways you'll leave these premises for good and all."

Loraine, who had been penitent through the night, resolving to do better in future, now felt his temper rising and his resolution melting away, and he sat down to the table in a sullen mood. But he shortly after made up his mind to go to meeting that evening and return home at nine or ten o'clock. Therefore, at half past seven he started for church, and on meeting three or four of his old associates, told them of his plan.

"Well, come with us first, just for a few minutes, to the club rooms," said they.

"No, no, not to-night," he replied. "I have to be home early, and I cannot possibly go with you."

But they dragged him along, and it was impossible to get away from them, and once there there was no such thing as leaving, for in the excitement of the place he was induced to drink, and as the liquor was drugged, he soon felt no inclination to move from the charmed spot.

So the hours moved on until late into the night before he went home. When he reached that place it was three o'clock. His mother was at the door; she had not slept a moment, she said, from watching for him, and his father had awakened three or four times, angrily inquiring for him. But he was now asleep, and she wanted Loraine to creep noiselessly to bed, so he might not awaken him. But, alas! he did awake, and the scene that ensued was awful. Meeting the stupefied boy on the stair landing, he ordered him to leave the house at once; he could stay only at the peril of his life. The poor mother begged that he might be allowed to remain till morning. But no; into the street he was driven, with the threat that if he ever entered the house again he should be expelled with still greater harshness.

Loraine crept silently to the most convenient shelter, which was the carriage house, and there slept on the carriage cushions till morning. There his mother found him, as she arose before her husband.

"My dear boy," she said, winding her arms about his neck, "it will not answer for your father to find you here, so I will bring you out some breakfast, and some money with which to get out of this town, where you have had so many vile associates; and I hope you will find something to do and become good and steady. After a few days write me where you are, and I will send you a trunk of clothes and another of books. In future shun all evil company, and when you next meet your father, let him see one who has entirely reformed, and who will bring him no further dishonor."

"I will, dear mother. It is just as you say. I did not mean to get into disgrace last night. I started for church, and should have been at home at an early hour, only that I was fairly dragged in another direction by my companions. I think if father had taken a different course with me, I would not be what I am now. You know how stern and exacting he has been, and never, since I left college, have I felt that I could enter his office and study under his tuition. Had he been kind and gentle like you, dear mother," said Loraine, kissing her tearful cheek, "he might have induced me to do just what he wished; but, after this, I will endeavor to do right. That text, 'As ye sow, so shall ye reap,' is continually in my mind, and I am going to begin anew and try to do right."

On hearing this Mrs. Bliss was overjoyed.

"Then I shall feel quite easy about you, and feel that my prayers are being answered, my dearest boy. Perhaps God has taken this way to remove you from your wicked companions."

Then she went into the house and brought him some food; he soon ate it, and, after bidding her an affectionate farewell, and promising to write her often, directing his letters to a fictitious name known only to themselves, he left her in time to take the early train for somewhere. Where that somewhere was he had not yet decided.

Once aboard the train, he kept on till he reached the city of Stanton, about fifty miles from his home. There he stopped and looked around, and in a few days was able to write his mother that he had found a situation as clerk in a dry goods store at a moderate salary. This did not look very ambitious, but it gratified his mother to learn that he was in a respectable employment. Then, when his day's work was done, instead of going to gambling saloons and other dens of iniquity, he went to church, and ere long became a member of it, after which he made up his mind to study for the ministry. His mother sent him money from time to time to pay the expenses of his theological course, and in the course of time his future career looked a promising one.

Four years passed, and his name had never been mentioned in his father's household in his hearing. And just four years from the day he left home, a Mr. Bliss, from no one knew where, made an appointment to preach at the Congregational church, which [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible]

It is just four years to-day [illegible]

"Wonder where he is now? Sometimes, wife, I think I was a little hasty with him."

"Then you wouldn't be glad to see him, perhaps."

"I would be so glad to find him [illegible]."

By this time they had reached the church, finding they were a little late, as the minister was giving out his text. "As ye sow, so shall ye reap." Quietly they entered the door, and there for a moment Mr. Bliss stood [illegible] the [illegible] as though rooted to his seat, where his wife was sitting with her hand [illegible] upon [illegible]. Could it be possible he asked himself that this [illegible] was [illegible] before him? [illegible] it was his son [illegible] stood [illegible] [illegible] And he [illegible] to him, stood [illegible] which he transfixed to the spot. His [illegible] toward the one now so superior to his [illegible] before him, and he felt condemned.

It was observed, too, by the audience, that the preacher was becoming deeply affected as he looked in the direction of the [illegible] pew, and each moment he waxed more and more eloquent as he enlarged upon the subject of his text, "As ye shall sow, so shall ye reap."

"Yes," thought the old gentleman, "as I sowed, so I have reaped. For the last four years I have lived in constant regret of my unjust treatment, my harsh language to, then, my son. Had I been kind and forbearing with him from the first, he would not have been led away to the haunts of dissipation which came so near to ruining him. But by his mother's counsel, his conduct, and the Grace of God, his feet have been arrested in the slippery, downward course he once pursued."

After the services ended, Mr. and Mrs. Bliss remained in their pew until a part of the congregation had left the aisle, and then moved forward to the pulpit to meet their son, and pour their tears upon his neck. Then all was forgiven, and he went with them to their home, never to be turned from their door again.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE.

LONDON, April 21.—Consols 10[illegible]; money [illegible] U. S. Bonds—4s, 118; Closed 4s, 118[illegible].

THURSDAY, April 21.

The financial situation at San Francisco is [illegible] reported under date of the 21st. The accumulations of money are far in excess of the present needs [illegible] requires the best of security to take it up [illegible] [illegible] and though it is disposed to seek employment there is really no distress about the matter, since holders are willing to wait still longer for a better opportunity, which they confidently look for in a not very distant future. How and where the opening is to occur is not yet of present apparent, but that it will come is a foregone [illegible] conclusion. That San Francisco capital is seeking other fields of investment, and in large quantities, cannot be doubted. When the opportunities for large and unusual profits such as have been the case in the past cease, the now current holders [illegible] and feel under it to an astounding degree, being seemingly incapable of reasoning from any save the old standpoint of gain. The fact is most of them have obtained their wealth more by fortuitous circumstances than through the real business facilities [illegible] which their communities [illegible] so that by an unavoidable [illegible] of this old-time [illegible] and the entertaining of a better [illegible] feeling with the [illegible] of [illegible] gains only that they are gains, we will emerge into that prosperous and contented groove which is the governing principle of trade the world over. [illegible] commercial [illegible] rate at [illegible] per cent on the best paper [illegible] at much cheaper prices.

There has been no special activity in the wheat market during the past week. Business throughout has been light but steady. All offering has been readily taken at $1 30, the market closing weak at that figure. A rise in Europe reported by telegraph elsewhere and which would naturally cause an advance here of from 2 to 3 cents per cental, has been more than counterbalanced by a rise in charter rates. At the rate last given on Wednesday for the Relief and [illegible] shillings, the price for wheat must come down unless the English market advances. Already one or two firms have revised their orders, making $1 28 per cental as their outside offer. There is no disengaged ship in port and none offering on the market for charter.

Wool is beginning to arrive in small lots from eastern Oregon, but not enough has yet come forward to establish values in this market. During the past week offers have been made on small lots of 16 to 18c, which have been for the most part declined. We note sales, however, of 12,000 to 15,000 pounds at this range of prices. Not enough of the new clip has been received here to give reliable indication of what the condition will be, but so far as the small receipts to date may be taken as an indication, the condition will compare favorably with former years, and even better than last year, but whether these parcels are from favored localities, and consequently better than the average condition, we are unable to state. Receipts here will probably not materially increase before the middle of May, after which time shipments will come forward freely. In valley wool there is nothing to report, as it will be forty to sixty days before wools from this section are ready for market.

Reports from down the river state that the average nightly catch is 16 fish, which are of good size and in good condition. Several canneries have already commenced operations and others will go to work this week.

To-day there was a remarkable advance in Oregon Railway & Navigation and Northern Pacific stocks in New York. The former started at 143½ and jumped to 151. Two days ago it was 140. The other advanced from 40½ to 42½ for common, and from 69 to 71½ for preferred. It is probable that some change in the relations of the two companies towards each other, of which no one here appears yet to be advised, is the cause of this sharp advance in their stocks.

Home Produce Market.

Stocks of flour are still increasing, and sales are slow. Oats are very firm and the market is almost bare. Hay is firm at quotations, but the market is well supplied. Mill feed is dull sale and stocks are accumulating. Cured meats are dull. The market is flooded with second quality country bacon, which is slow, but a first-class article always finds ready sale. Lard is very firm, market well supplied with eastern and California. The demand for dried fruit is increasing, very firm at quotations. Hides [illegible] [illegible] in large lots, [illegible] Butter is firmer, though quotations are unchanged. Onions are very scarce and very firm at quotations. Prices may go higher, dependent, however, upon the new crop in California, which will very soon come in. Eggs are weak, the market being overstocked. Cheese is weaker, owing to large supplies from California. Prices may possibly drop next week. Green apples are almost out of market—no large lots to be had. Salmon is dull sale. There is still a large supply of last year's catch on the market. Nothing doing in hops. A few large growers are holding off for June prices. The prospect for the coming season is for lower prices than ruled last. Potatoes are firmer. The market is well supplied, and there is a small export demand for California.
